

EBA recommendations for Assistance for the Anaesthesiologist

- All anaesthesiologists should have immediate access to a trained assistant for every anaesthetic.
- There should be a national training program for these assistants in every country.
- Hospitals must provide adequate resources to employ, train and develop sufficient numbers of assistants to ensure that all patients receive a safe anaesthesia service in accordance with good practice.

Published 14 February 2016